

Being Neighborly has been on my mind lately. It can be a challenge can't it! I am like all of you, surrounded by neighbors. Many of them are truly wonderful blessings in my life. But, I must admit, some of them I could do without. As I have listened to the challenges some of you have had with your neighbors, it has made me reevaluate my relationships with my own neighbors. Gradually I have realized that maybe it isn't just their responsibility to be nice and get along with me. I am more aware now that change begins with me. If I want good relationships, I must cultivate and nurture those relationships. My challenge to each of you is to follow my lead. I agree! It isn't easy, but what a great community we would all live in without neighborly strife!
